La pratica del whistleblowing e la sua giustificazione

In occasione della pubblicazione del volume di Emanuela Ceva e Michele Bocchiola
Is Whistleblowing a Duty?, Polity Press 2019

Milano, 4 giugno 2019, ore 16:00 - 18:00, Biblioteca di Politeia
c/o Università degli Studi di Milano, via Festa del Perdono, 7

“Whistleblowers are members of a public or private organization who report some kind of wrongdoing, disclosing privileged information to a direct superior, to some authority, or to the public. (...) The study of whistleblowing has been central to legal theory for some time (e.g., labour and corporate law), economics (e.g., business management and administration), and business ethics. The study of this practice from the perspective of political theory is still underdeveloped. But this is a perspective from which important insights may derive, especially regarding the normative status of this practice in the public domain and its possible contribution to the promotion of justice and public accountability in non-ideal conditions. In particular, a central but underexplored question concerned whether and how whistleblowing is morally justifiable, and, if so, whether it is required or merely permissible. This is a significant question for political analysis in its own right, but it also has important bearing on the discussion of the extent to which whistleblowers ought to be protected or rewarded. This book aims at filling this lacuna.”
