Ethics and Epistemology

Abstract: This is a comment on Piergiorgio Donatelli's book La vita umana in prima persona (2012). Here I point out some similarities between Donatelli's description of moral life and the conception of knowledge based on the interaction between empirical elements and rational components of different kinds. I also mention the problem – already faced by J. S. Mill – of the relationship between freedom of the subject, causal determinism and scientific laws.

Keywords: Subjectivity, Anti-absolutism, Moral freedom, Determinism.
