Responsibility between Philosophy and Science

Abstract: The aim of this work is to discuss two possible integrations to Magni's recent book on the contribution empirical research could provide to the philosophical debate on responsibility. I will, therefore, introduce the general aim and the central method of the book (§1). Then, I will focus on the contribution empirical research can provide by considering experimental philosophy (§2) and the empirical research on implicit biases. I will, thus, conclude that these two examples would allow Magni to argue for the need of a dialogue between ethics and sciences also as far as the debate on responsibility is concerned (§4).

Keywords: Responsibility, Thought experiments, Experimental philosophy, Implicit bias.
