Moral Reflection between Edification and Knowledge

Abstract: The essay engages Piergiorgio Donatelli's La filosofia etica e la vita etica, and in particular the idea, informing the theoretical premises of the book, according to which, within moral reflection, there would be an essential tension between edification and knowledge. Contrary to such divide, I survey Donatelli's strategy for a reconstruction of moral reflection generous enough to accommodate these two modalities of moral transformation, showing how their respective emphases make justice to a different aspect of our moral lives.

Keywords: Moral theory, Self-transformation, Contemporary ethics, Habit, Convention.
