Future Generations, Transitivity, and Thought Experiments. A Reply to Pontara

Abstract: This article replies to Pontara's remarks made in the discussion of his book on future generations ethics. The author tries to clarify how person-affecting consequentialism can state the intransitivity of comparative evaluations (better than, worse than etc.) and can respond to the non-identity problem.

Keywords: Consequentialism, Transitivity, Non-identity problem, Person-affecting view, Comparative evaluation.
