Abstract. The book investigates women's bodies, attempting to combine the concepts of self-determination, dignity and health, and highlighting the great paradox of medicine, which behind a false neutrality is instead a science that is substantially male-dominated. In this context, it explores the not yet fully developed potential of gender medicine as an engine of equality in the realisation of the fundamental right to health.

Keywords: Constitution, Equality, Self-determination, Dignity, Health and women's bodies.
