Climate Change and Human Rights from the Perspective of International Law

Abstract: The recent book of Attilio Pisanò Il diritto al clima addresses the question whether climate change and its negative effects are an issue of human rights and if so, what are the legal consequences that the recognition of an inherent interdependence between human rights and the protection of the environment may lead to.

Keywords: Environmental Protection, Climate Change, International Human Rights Law, Justiciability of environmental obligations before human rights bodies.
