Beyond the Legal Regulation of Sex: Sexual Relationships, Consent, and “Good Sex”

Abstract: The paper critically examines Tommaso Gazzolo's thesis that the sexual relationship is inherently a legal construct, produced by the law. It explores the ambiguity of the concept of “sexual relationship” advanced by the author, and some of the issues related to consent and female desire, as articulated by the author based on psychoanalytic theories. Finally, it calls not only for legal intervention but also for a re-articulation of the sexual sphere towards a relationship of reciprocity and “good sex”.

Keywords: Sexual consent, Legal regulation of sex, Sexual relationship, Feminist critique.
