

Francesca Magliulo
Corporate Responsibility Manager, Edison S.p.A

Francesca Magliulo has been Corporate Responsibility Manager for Edison since 2009, working within the external relations and communication department.

After completing her classical studies, Francesca graduated from the State University of Milan in modern literature with a major in history. Her final thesis entitled “The photographic image of Montecatini. Technical documentation and propaganda during Fascism” focused on the history of industry.

After working with several publishers on the creation of essays and books about the history of enterprise and industrial design, in 1998 she began her professional carrier in external relations at Edison. Since 2003, she has focused on corporate social responsibility projects and activities related to the cultural and historical heritage of Edison.

In 2011-2012 she received her master in “Business of energy and utilities” at MIP (the management school at Politecnico of Milan). She is member of the steering committee of Global Compact Italian Network, member of the board of directors of the Center for the Corporate Culture, CSR expert of the Knowledge Development Committee of AIIA (Italian Association Internal Auditors) and member of CSR Manager Network in Italy.
